ENVOY HELD OUSTED IN A SECURITY CASE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5 (AP)

A Senate subcommittee is checking into allegations by a Foreign Service officer, Stephen A. Koczak, that he was forced into retirement after charging his superior with security violations.

Senator Sam J. Ervin Jr., Democrat of North Carolina, chairman of the Senate Constitutional Rights subcommittee, said in a letter Nov. 17 to Secretary of State Dean Rusk that the allegations, if true, "raise serious questions concerning due process and fundamental fair play in the department's dealings with its employees." He asked Mr. Rusk to investigate the matter.

The complaints were lodged with the subcommittee by Mr. Koczak, a Foreign Service officer for 20 years, who was placed on retirement in January of this year under the department's "selection out" procedures.

A subcommittee aide said that Mr. Koczak, while serving in West Berlin in 1961, charged his superior, who was not identified, with placing telephone calls to Warsaw from East Berlin to avoid possible monitoring by the Central Intelligence Agency or State Department security officers.

The superior then put derogatory statements about Mr. Koczak in the Foreign Service Officer's efficiency reports, the subcommittee was told. In the subsequent procedures involved in the selection out process Mr. Koczak complained of many violations of his rights.
